MR. HARDING'S

SECOND THOUGHTS.

Regardless of Mr. Harding's address to Congress "rejecting the League covenant and uttering that rejection to our own people and to the world," Rene Viviani told the American newspaper men in Paris yesterday that "the League of Nations will continue" and "eventually America will adhere to it."

M. Viviani was reporting to them some of the impressions derived from his recent mission to the United States in behalf of the French Government, and while his prediction in respect to the adherence of this country to the League runs counter to all that President Harding has said, it is not at all incompatible with the steady drift of the Administration toward the Wilson policies.

Rhetorically Mr. Harding has scrapped the League but he is engaged chiefly in scrapping his various utterances about foreign affairs. During the campaign he promised to "reverse" the entire foreign policy of the Government. In actual fact he has reversed nothing and has been carrying out the program of the Wilson Administration in so far as he has done anything definite.

In October he was alive with enthusiasm for the Knox resolution declaring a separate peace with Germany. He made a specific pledge in these words:

As a matter of fact, this was what I said: That just as soon as Congress would pass a resolution declaring a state of formal peace I would sign it. This was repeated in his address of April 12:

To establish the state of technical peace without further delay I should approve a declaratory resolution by Congress to that effect, with the qualifications essential to protect our rights.

The Senate has passed such a resolution, but it is held up in the House through the influence of the Administration, which is not so keen about "the state of technical peace" as it was thirty days ago. It is not Congress but the President who is responsible for the "further delay."

In his Des Moines speech Mr. Harding was all for taking the American troops out of Germany at once. In reply to a question, "How about the boys who are over in Germany yet?" the candidate replied:

I want to allude to that. They haven't any business there, and just as soon as we can declare peace we can be sure they will be coming home, as they ought to come.

Again Mr. Harding's pre-election enthusiasm has oozed away. The American troops are still on the Rhine, whether they have "any business there" or not, and Mr. Harding, in spite of his fears about "involvements," is actually accepting an invitation from the Allies for American representation in the Supreme Council, the Council of Ambassadors and the Allied Reparation Commission, and designating the representatives!

The World is not reproaching Mr. Harding for his changes of opinion. On the contrary, they are greatly to his credit and show a growing sense of responsibility. We have said many times since election that the best thing he could do for the country and for his Administration would be to forget all the nonsense he uttered during the campaign and shape his foreign policy without prejudice in accordance with the inexorable facts of the situation. The nearer he brings it to the foreign policy of his distinguished predecessor the better it will be for the United States and for all the world.

M. Viviani's prediction is not so fantastic as it may seem, in spite of Henry Cabot Lodge and the Senate Irreconcilables. They have swallowed their record on the Colombian treaty and they may eventually be compelled to swallow their record on the League of Nations.—N. Y. World.

Men Held in Auto Case.

Following an investigation by the Baltimore police in regard to the stolen auto with a Maryland license, which was recovered at this place last week the police of Washington, D. C., came here Saturday and took away the three men who had the car in their possession, a few days previously Corporal Gleason, of the local police arrested three men, who gave their names as Jack Earle, Harry McGuire and Milton Wisner, of Baltimore, and who were driving the car with one Maryland license plate. They were held pending an investigation which led to the recovery of the car by its owner James A. Rundel of 1315 Park Road, Washington, D. C., whose garage had been broken open and the car stolen therefrom.

LONG—HINKEL

On May 5th, 1921, Mr. David Palmer Long and Miss Frances Willard Hinkel, both of Baker's Summit, Pa., were united in marriage by the pastor, Rev. D. F. Gephart at the Lutheran parsonage at Woodbury, Pa.

The young couple bear with them the best wishes of their friends on the voyage of life together. They went to Pittsburgh and other places of interest on their honeymoon and will be at home to their friends by the 12th of May.

SOME INTERESTING FEATURES OF THIS YEAR'S CHAUTAQUA

Four all-star musical companies, a lightning-change impersonator, a New York play success, and four headline lectures are included in the five-day Chautauqua line-up for Bedford, beginning June 20. Preliminary advertising material and a generous supply of season tickets will be brought by the Redpath Company's advance representative three or four weeks ahead of the opening.

The program arrangement, as announced by the local Chautauqua committee, follows:

FIRST DAY: American Troubadours in a costumed musical program.

Elwood T. Bailey in his "All Aboard" lecture.

SECOND DAY: White's Orchestra in two instrumental programs.

John B. Ratto, prince of impersonators.

THIRD DAY: Lillian Johnson Duo. Thomas Brooks Fletcher, dramatic orator.

FOURTH DAY: W. D. Campbell in a lecture-demonstration on "Home Art".

New York Comedy success, "Nothing But the Truth".

FIFTH DAY: O. L. Kiplinger, former chaplain of Indiana state prison. Knight Macgregor, baritone, and assistant artists.

Some new features will be introduced for the junior chautauquans, and special badges will be furnished all boys and girls holding season tickets.

DRAFT-EVADORS—AND OTHERS

Secretary Baker's refusal to publish the lists of draft-evaders in their present inaccurate form has been amply justified by the errors already revealed. The inclusion of a Lieutenant Commander in the Naval Reserve, as well as men now dead who served honorably in the war, gives some indication of the unreliability of the records. The suspicion cast by a similarity in names on one of the fifty-four World War possessors of the Congressional Medal of Honor—the highest the United States can confer—foreshadows the tragic misunderstandings certain to follow.

No public apology can erase such accusations, caught up in rumors and scattered from coast to coast. Ill news travels faster than the most penitent corrections.

"Publication of the first lists of draft deserters by the new administration," says Col. Galbreath of the American Legion, "supports the view held by those who have studied the situation in advance that in many instances names of men who served their country faithfully have been included in the lists." Besides supporting this view the action of the War Department appears to have done nothing else whatsoever.

It was the business of the War Department to ascertain what citizens failed to live up to their obligations under the Selective Service Act. Finding the job a hard one the department of the Harding Administration has dumped it on the country, regardless of consequences, and the innocent must suffer with the guilty.

JUDICIAL NON-PARTISAN BILL REPEALED

THE GHOST AT THE PHONE

By GERTSON SCHAEFFER

The end of the busy day had come at last, and H. Miller Virry found the headache still with him.

All during the rush hours of the day, as he had watched his assignments and ideas develop into stories under the deft work of the reporters, he had waited for this hour.

Away back there, somewhere, never quite hidden by the thousands of ideas that whirled through the streets of his mind, there had been the one thought that when the day was over he would write a letter.

But about the headache—lately it had never left him. The malady seemed to be seated in the very dome of his head.

Now it was time to write. It was Saturday evening, and he was alone.

A furtive look came into Virry's eyes. He even crossed the room and looked behind a locker door that was standing open. Somehow it did not seem strange to him that he should do this. He wanted to be alone.

He walked over to the police reporter's desk. The typewriter there was the best in the office. MacDonald always kept his machine clean.

The steady hum that rose from the sidewalk told him that it was six o'clock.

The thought of the letter he would write came forward and waved away that other consciousness—that he had not eaten since breakfast—and he seated himself at the typewriter again.

He drummed with his long fingers contemplatively, looked about the room a moment with a nervous glance, and then began writing, using his index fingers only, as they write who are self-taught operators:

"The Town Where You Are Not.
"The Day When I Miss You Most.
"The Girl Whom I Love;
"I Don't Know Where.
"Sweetheart:"

That cracking sound made him jump again. He began writing:

"This letter, sweetheart, will surely test your love, for I have so much trouble to put into it that you will hardly be able to read it. I'm hardly able to write it."

He jumped from his chair and hurried to the telephone.

"Hello," he said. "Hello—hello." He was annoyed, but courteous. He listened a moment.

"Why, I don't want any number. I thought you rang. All right, Central." He returned to his letter:

"Sometimes I think perhaps you know all about it. Then it seems senseless for me to want to write to you."

"At other times it seems as if you had forgotten all about me. Then I yearn to tell you."

"If you do know perhaps you can almost look over my shoulder now and see me writing. That wouldn't be senseless, though—would it, milady?"

"It would be just like talking over old times that we both knew all about, but love to hear each other mention. If you don't know—"

He went over to the telephone again.

"Hello," he said in his businesslike manner.

There was always a note of expectancy in Virry's telephone "Hello," the ring of a telephone in a newspaper office may mean a great sensation.

His left hand was on the top of his head, where the ache was heaviest.

"I didn't ring," he heard Central say. A puzzled expression came over his face, and he went back to the typewriter.

"—you would be interested to read this, I thought."

"I've been thinking about you every day. And here it is Saturday night. Saturday nights I am loneliest."

"When I first met you, we used to have our six o'clock Saturday dinners at the cafes, didn't we? And then I would take you home."

"After a while I used to come to your home every Saturday night. You said you liked that better."

"So many Saturday nights have passed since I last saw you."

He smiled. As he drew away from the desk the noise of his chair on the floor and the sound of his footsteps resounded through the room. Long ago the presses had stopped their vibration and the building was deserted and dark.

His letter had been written slowly, for it required much thinking—a letter of that sort.

"Hello," he said as he took down the receiver. "Why—why—why?" There was an astonishment in his voice, and his eyes widened almost irrationally. "This can't be you"—Central keep off please.

"Tell me, dear—sweetheart—what's the matter? I don't want a number! Now she's off the line! Quick, Central! Get her for me. I'll give you matinee passes if you do. What's that? No one on the line—That's strange—Can't get her? No one to get? You didn't ring?"

Virry hung up the receiver and hurried back to the typewriter with a smile on his face.

"You have just called me up, but something was the matter with the line. You'll call again and so I'll go on with the letter and hand it to you as soon as I see you."

"I was writing about the lonely Saturday nights. Somehow I don't seem so lonely since I began to write to-night.

I have decided to write, anyhow. Now, as I write, I feel happier—excuse me. Telephone again. Hope it's you."

"Central!" he fairly roared this time.

That girl is on the line again.

"You can't tell me she isn't. I know her voice.—Yes, dear, this is I. Sweetheart, where are you? Tell me quickly! I'll come right there. Tell me quickly! Hurry, before she shuts us off!"

He spoke so rapidly that his words formed one long, incoherent yell that echoed wildly through the big room.

"Central, I want that number! I want that girl who was talking! God! I must talk to her! Get her! Some one did ring. Didn't I hear it? And I heard her voice. Now, there she is.—Yes, now I can hear you, darling."

"Now, Central, steady a moment until I find out where this girl is. Where, dear? Where? Where? Louder! She's gone, Central! She's gone! She's gone!"

But suddenly he was talking over a dead wire. At the other end, a badly frightened little telephone girl was reporting to the chief operator the strange calls from the Telegram office.

Virry walked back to the typewriter and wrote:

"It was you again, but I couldn't hear you."

"If I only knew where you were, I'd come to you right away. If I only knew in what direction to go, I'd start out. But perhaps you'll call again, and so I'll go on with my letter."

"There are other nights than Saturday nights that are lonely."

"Sunday nights you used to go to the theaters with me. We always had the same pair of seats, you remember."

"How many songs I can remember that you and I have heard together! 'I Shall Never Forget My First Meeting With You'—remember it?"

"Then there was 'A Woman's Just a Woman, My Boy, but a Good Cigar Is a Smoke.' I remember you didn't like the song, until it came to the last verse where it runs. 'A woman's still a woman when a cigar's gone' up in smoke—I don't know about that, though; I can always get another cigar."

"Then there was that song, 'Dearie.' How that word echoed and pulsed and beat through that magnificent chorus, just as it echoes and pulses through my mind!"

"Oh, there were so many songs, so many plays, so many hours, so many events, so many thoughts, so many experiences, so many pleasures! How do you suppose I can write them all down?"

"They are crowding by the thousands up into the front of my brain, demanding a place on this paper—but here you are again. If I don't get you this time I'll—"

The telephone really rang this time in two bounds he reached it.

"Hello," he said. "Now, Central, be more careful this time. If you only knew how much I want to talk to her—Why, it's I! Why, Virry, the city editor! Keep off the line, sir!"

"Yes, dear, I hear you. I'll talk to you when this man gets off the line. Hurry up and tell me where you are before he bothers us again. I'll come right to you.—The chief? Yes. But keep off the line, chief. I'll talk to you later."

"What am I doing here? It's eleven o'clock? Well, what of that—Get off the line, sir! By God, get off the line! You've got a story for me? No, I won't come downstairs—Wait a moment sweetheart—You'll send somebody up here? Well, I don't want to be bothered."

A dogged tone was creeping into Virry's voice. Somehow it didn't seem strange that the chief of police should be asking him to come down to the sidewalk.

He was determined to stay at the telephone until he talked with the girl.

The pain in his head suddenly became sharper. He thrust his long fingers through his hair, right over the place where the ache seemed the greatest—if she could only hear him!

"Sweetheart! Sweetheart!" he shouted faintly. Suddenly he became silent. His eyes turned to one of the doors that opened into the hallway.

Suddenly he rushed toward the door his arms extended. "Darling!" he cried.

All the longing of his man's heart sounded in that pleading, ecstatic cry. He folded his arms, and embraced—nothing!

His right hand went to the top of his head. He staggered and fell, face forward against the door. His head struck the glass, which, breaking, made a rattle and crash that echoed and re-echoed through the hallways of the great deserted, ten-story building.

Virry fell to the floor, miraculously unharmed. But he did not try to rise.

A big policeman carefully broke away the remaining jagged pieces of glass so that they might not fall on the prostrate form within. Then Hennessy, the little police surgeon, climbed through the aperture.

"Hemorrhage of the brain," he said shortly. "He stopped me on the street only last Saturday and told me that his head never stopped aching."

"I told him he was working too hard. But that wasn't it."

"He's never stopped worrying since his girl died."

BASED ON EVIDENCE OF BEDFORD PEOPLE

Grateful thousands tell it—If weak backs made strong—If weak kidneys made well. Urinary disorder corrected. Bedford people add their testimony.

They praise Doan's Kidney Pills. Bedford evidence is now complete. Bedford testimony is confirmed; Repents of early relief substantiated.

Merit doubly proved by test of time.

Let a Bedford citizen speak.

Mrs. Martha Davidson, 357 W. Pitt St., says: "I was very nervous and had severe headaches. My back ached constantly and the least bit of work tired me. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I decided to give them a trial and got a box at Heckerman's Drug Store. In every way they acted just as represented and gave me prompt relief."

OVER SIX YEARS LATER.

Mrs. Davidson said: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills once in a while since first endorsing them and they have kept me in good health."

LESSON FOR MAY 15

WORKING WITH OTHERS.

LESSON TEXT—I Cor. 12:4-27.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular.—I Cor. 12:27.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—I Kings 5:1-12, Neh. 3:1-32, 4:15-23.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Helping One Another.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Team Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Co-operation or Competition.

This Scripture pictures the church, the body of Christ, under the figure of the human body. The topic "Working With Others" can only have application to Christians working with each other; for it is as members of the body of Christ that this relationship and obligation are set forth. The church is an organism, not merely an organization. As such it is:

I. One Body (vv. 12-20).

As a body it has many members, each with a definite ministry or function. Many members are essential to a body or organism. So it is with the church. Each member has its own gift and office. The proof of this oneness is that by the sovereign act of the Holy Spirit all believers are constituted one body (v. 13). A multiplicity of organisms does not make a body, but a multiplicity of members with their separate functions. There is no room for jealousy or discontentment among them (vv. 15, 16). It would be as reasonable for the foot to complain of its lot and refuse to function as a foot, as for one member of a church to envy the place of another. A deacon who is such by the appointment of God should not complain that he is not a minister. The church needs its foot-members, that is, those who are swift to run on its errands; it needs its eye-members, who are quick to perceive opportunities for service; it needs its ear-members, who are quick to hear the call to duty; it needs its tongue-members, who can speak forth the message of truth; it needs its hand-members to perform its many deeds of kindness. Each member of the church has its place by the sovereign will of God (v. 18). If this were realized there would be the most efficient co-operation among the members of the church. The pastor would faithfully do the work of a pastor; the minister, the work of a minister; the teacher, the work of a teacher; etc.

II. The Mutual Dependence of the Members of the Body (v. 21).

They must co-operate for the life and service of the body. As the foot cannot dispense with the head, the eye with the hand, etc., so in the church, even the most highly gifted are dependent upon those of the lower order. Self-conceit and pride are as much out of place on the part of the highest in ability as of the lowest. In fact, a sober realization of this will do away with selfish pride.

III. The Least Attractive Members Are the Most Necessary (vv. 22, 23).

In the human body the heart is of more vital importance than the tongue. So in the church prayer is of much more importance than the gift of eloquence. Many examples could be given of those who wrestled with God in the closet, doing more for the cause of Christ than those who shone forth most conspicuously in the public eye. The lungs are never seen or heard, yet without them the tongue could not utter a sound.

IV. The Different Members Have Been Adjusted by God (vv. 24, 25).

So perfectly has this been done that if each performs its own function there will be harmony in the body. All schism in the church is due to failure of one member to perform its duty because of envy of the position of another. By considering Christ the head and obeying Him all strife and division in the church will be eliminated.

V. Members Are Sympathetically Related (vv. 25-27).

One member should have the same care for the other as for itself. The eye has the same concern for the foot as it has for itself; so the most eloquent has the same solicitude for the humblest member as for itself. This is true because the suffering of the one is the suffering of the other; the honor of the one is the honor of the other; the sorrow of the one is the sorrow of the other; the property of the one is the property of the other; the shame and disgrace of the one is the shame and disgrace of the other. This is true because there is a common life which is derived from and directed by its head, Jesus Christ (Eph. 5:23).

Doing Things.

God made us to do things, and there is no tonic like that which comes from doing things worth while. A clear conscience and a clean life are far more to be desired than money. Real happiness without the achievement of some aim is unthinkable.

More Valuable Than Gold.

A good disposition is more valuable than gold; for the latter is the gift of fortune, but the former is the dower of nature.—Addison.

HE DREADED TO SEE NIGHT COME

Erie Man Was So Nervous He Couldn't Sleep Suffered 15 Years—Tanlac Ends Troubles.

"There's bound to be something unusual about a medicine to do what Tanlac has done for me," said Andrew W. Bixby, of 917 W. 11th St., Erie, Penna., who is now in his seventy-seventh year.

"My appetite was awfully poor, and even the little I managed to eat seemed to lump together in my stomach, causing me no end of trouble. I had a bitter disagreeable taste in my mouth almost continually. My liver and kidneys bothered me a great deal and I had such awful pains across the small of my back it nearly killed me in going up or down stairs. I just dreaded to see night come, for I was so nervous and miserable I couldn't sleep, and I would get up in the mornings feeling worse than when I went to bed. Then I had rheumatism, too, and the joints in my limbs would become stiff and sore and my feet would swell all up."

"I read so much about Tanlac I decided to give it a trial. I have taken four bottles now and have a splendid appetite and can eat just anything I want without my stomach bothering me a bit. My liver and kidneys are in fine order and those awful pains are completely gone from my back. The rheumatism has disappeared also, and the medicine is bringing me right around in every way. I am certainly thankful for the wonderful good Tanlac has done me and can't say enough for it."—Adv.

THE U. S. ROYAL CORD

A famous tire—and a famous tread. Acknowledged among motorists and dealers alike as the world's foremost example of Cord tire building. Always delivering the same repeated economy, tire after tire, and season after season.

The stripe around the sidewall is registered as a trade-mark in the U. S. Patent Office.

How you can measure tire value in 1921 —

OFTEN it's surprising the number of different tire views that come out in a chance talk at the curb or in the leisure of a friend's garage.

Almost every day you come across the man human enough to believe he can outguess the cut-price tag on "job-lots," "discontinued lines" and "surplus stocks."

His opposite is the hardpan car owner who sticks year in and year out to a standard brand as the only rational economy.

Many will remember the scarcity of U. S. Tires last year.

A hardship at the time, but a benefit now. There are no U. S. Tires to be worked off—no accumulations—no forced selling of any U. S. brand—no shipping of tires from one part of the country to another to "find a market."

There are 92 U. S. Factory Branches. Each one gets its share of U. S. Tires. There is a broad, constant, even distribution of U. S. Tires always going on from these Branches to the dealer.

Buy a U. S. Tire anywhere—in a community of 500 people or even less—and you get a fresh, live tire of current production—with all the original service and mileage the factory put into it.

The owner of a medium or light-weight car stands on equal ground with every other car owner.

Any United States Tire is a universal full money's worth—backed up with a leadership policy of equal quality, buying convenience and price for everybody.

The Early Balkan Settlers.

The first barbarians to settle permanently in the Balkan peninsula were the Bulgars, a Finnish people, whose home was the middle Volga districts. The Slavs are said to have begun to pour into this region as early as the third century, but they were not established until some time after the Bulgarian invasion.

Mr. Growcher Speaks.

"Some of these problems they keep putting up to us," said Mr. Growcher, "make me think of old-fashioned conundrums. You're supposed to keep guessing. 'What's the difference?' when it doesn't make much real difference whether there's any difference or not."

Seven Edwards, Kings of England.

Seven English kings have borne the name Edward. The first three belonged to the Plantagenet family; the fourth belonged to the house of York, and so did the fifth, the boy murdered in the Tower by his uncle, Richard II.; the sixth was a Tudor, and the seventh was Edward VII.

Live Like Cliff Dwellers.

A characteristic bit of the old world may be seen near Roundup, Mont., where Austrian and Italian miners have built their homes in ancient fashion, under a projecting rim rock. By simply erecting a stone wall they have a shelter that cannot be bettered for warmth in winter and coolness in summer.

SANITARY HOUSES FOR HENS

To Secure Adequate Returns in Eggs and Growth Buildings Must Be Light and Ventilated.

Chickens will not give adequate returns in eggs or growth when kept under insanitary conditions, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The construction of the poultry house should receive first attention. Sufficient air space, lighting and ventilation should be provided, and the entire house cleaned at frequent intervals.

While these precautions cannot be depended upon to control mites and lice, they aid the poultryman in determining when these pests are present. Furthermore, the fowls are kept in vigorous condition, which in itself aids in controlling pests. Dirty and insanitary houses provide ideal breeding conditions for insects and germs which are detrimental to poultry. Diseased fowls, or those with malformed bills or feet, fall ready prey to lice, mites and other insect pests, and should be removed as soon as discovered.

DON'T FORCE BREEDING HENS

If Strong Healthy Chicks Are Desired Fowls Must Be Kept in Good Condition in Winter.

Many a breeder has fallen into the pit of forcing his breeders for winter eggs and then wonders how it is that the eggs don't hatch well in the spring. If you want strong healthy chicks and big hatches you will do well to keep your hens in good condition but not force them for heavy egg production.

OLD JUSTICE OF PEACE DOCKET

Dates From 1829 to 1840, and is Property of Earl R. Barnard of Archie, Mo. Docket kept by His Great-grandfather of Cumberland Valley Township.

"Docket, by George McCoy, 1829." The Democrat is indebted to Mrs. Earl R. Barnard, of Archie, Mo., for the pleasure of reviewing an old justice of the peace's court docket. The docket consists of 260 pages, and covers a period of 11 years—from 1829 to 1840—lacking eight years of being a century old. It is the property of Earl R. Barnard of Archie, and formerly belonged to his great-grandfather, George McCoy, a justice of the peace of Bedford County, Pennsylvania. The latter was the father of Brice McCoy a former well-known resident of Cass county who has been dead for some time. The date of his birth, 1834, is recorded on the docket, with the dates of the births of the other children of George McCoy. Brice McCoy is thought to be a cousin of Josiah Elder, the father of Dr. A. R. Elder, Mrs. Cary A. Brous and Mrs. P. S. Longenecker, all of Harrisonville, which, if true, would make George McCoy an uncle to Josiah Elder.

Besides this, the book is not of much local interest, except as an antiquity. In this latter respect, according to Cary A. Brous of Harrisonville, who has been a justice of the peace for Grand River for a number of years, it is wonderful—especially so when the costs of a case then and now are compared. The writing in the first part of the book is in a large flowing hand, well preserved and very legible, but the writing in the latter part of the book, while undoubtedly by the same person, and easily read, is different. Perhaps it is because the flourishes are left off. One thing interesting about the "hand," is where a "ss" occurs. It is rather confusing, because the old style "s" was made somewhat like an "f."

All of the cases entered in the docket are intensely interesting. Most of them are civil cases, only a few criminal cases being handled. In the civil cases, most of the suits are over accounts. In the first entry, the amount of the debt is not inserted, and some of the justice's fees are not listed. The case is: "Jans Elder vs. Harry Pierce. Issued to Constable Jacob Wertz, February the 10th, 1829. Summons. Not exceeding $100.00. Debt (blank). To appear on Saturday, the 14th day of February, 12 o'clock. Parties do not appear, and constable returns the summons. Non est inventus, or is not found. GEORGE MCCOY, Costs—Justice's summons, 9 cents; docket entry, 6 1/2 cents; constable's mileage, 48 cents.

Another interesting suit it this one; "George Lee vs. Paul Wertz and Henry Wertz. Summons. Demand not exceeding $100.00. Plea of trespass for damage. Issued to Constable Jacob Wertz on the 24th day of March, 1829, to appear on Tuesday, the 31st inst. Summons issued for one witness for plaintiff; served by plaintiff. Tuesday, parties appear, but suit is referred to be tried on Tuesday, the 7th of March, at the house of Jacob Waltman by William McFarren chosen by plaintiff, George James, chosen by defendant, and Campbell Hendrixon, by the consent of parties. Referees report in favor of the defendants; therefore, judgment is against the plaintiff, together with costs of suit. Costs: Docket entry, 6 1/2 cents; summons, 9 cents; subpoena for witness, 9 cents; entering rule to referees, 15 cents; entering report of referees, 6 1/2 cents; judgment, 25 cents; total (justice's) cost, 76 1/2 cents. Constable's cost—served on Campbell Hendrixon, 22 cents."

As near as one can determine, this suit is over a "book account" of 12 1/2 cents. The parties were: David Strong vs. S. Coble. Summons Demand not exceeding $100.00. Book account, 12 1/2 cents. Issued to Constable Jacob Wertz on the 7th day of June 1834 to appear on the 14th day of June at 10 o'clock a. m. June 14 judgment by default for the above debt and costs. Execution issued to Constable Wertz on the 14th day of June, returnable on the 4th day of July. Cost (justice): 25 cents; execution, 20 1/2 cents; satisfaction; 6 cents; total cost, 51 1/2 cents. Constable's cost, 25 cents, paid."

There are only six criminal entries in the docket, such as "threatening to burn some buildings, or kill some live stock, or do some personal injury," but "parties appeared and settled their disputes without further prosecution." Then there is the usual assault and battery cases, setting fire to woods, etc. The most interesting is the "Commonwealth vs G. Bowers. Warrant for profane swearing. Issued to Constable Elder on this 23rd day of February. March 10, 1838, defendant is brought personally before the justice and is found guilty of profane swearing seven oaths; judgment to the amount of $4.69 and cost of suit. Receive one-half of the above fine for the use of the poor of Co. Valley township by me—$2.34 1/2." No costs are mentioned.

Of course, the justice of the peace in those days collected bills as they do now. There is only one sample in the docket, and it is on a separate sheet of paper, as follows:

The Year 1833.
To making four pairs of shoes $2.00
To making one pair of pumps .50
To making one pair of boots 1.75
Ditto one pair of boots 1.75
To making one pair of shoes .75
To making one pair of shoes .75
To soeling and wetting one pair of shoes .50
To making one pair of shoes .75
To one dollar in cash 1.00
$9.75
Probate 12 1/2
(Signed:) Robert D. Johnstone.
Bedford County, ss. Appeared personally before me, the subscriber, one of the justices of the peace in and for said county, Jacob Brant, and, being duly sworn according to law, saith the above account is true to the best of his knowledge and belief. JACOB BRANT. Sworn and subscribed before me, the 27th day of August 1836. G. McCoy.

The account is very indefinite, and is given because of its antiquity. In comparing costs in a justice's court now, with the costs 98 years ago, Mr. Brous has furnished the following average justice of the peace's cost of the present time:

1821	1829
Summons	$.35 $.09
Docket entry	1.00 .06 1/2
Indexing	.10
Subpoena	.25 .09
Continuance	.25 .06 1/2
Judgment	.50 .06 1/2
Execution	.35 .20 1/2

Constable's Costs:
Execution or attachment $1.00 20 1/2
Return on summons .60 08 1/2

Judge Brous could not account for the fractional cents in the old docket, unless one-half and one-fourth-cent pieces were in use 100 years ago in that state.

WEDDING RECEPTION

On Wednesday evening, May 11th, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Amick of Wolfburg gave a reception dinner at their home in honor of the marriage of their daughter Cora to Mr. Dewey Ebersole, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin M. Ebersole of Bedford, upon the return of the bride and groom from their honeymoon spent at Harrisburg, Philadelphia and Washington, D. C.

The dinner was such a feast as Mrs. Amick is noted for preparing and was tastefully served to the large number of guests present who enjoyed the same to the fullest extent. In addition to the pleasures of the feast and the social indulgence of the guests, they were delightfully entertained with music and songs furnished by the young people present, Miss Mary Bittinger of Bedford and Miss Dorris Culp of Schellsburg presiding at the piano.

The following persons were present: Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Amick, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Ebersole, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Amick and son Donald, Emory, Cary, Orville, William, James, Helen, Richard and Arthur Amick, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin M. Ebersole and sons Herbert, Kenneth and Charles and daughters Mary and Mae of Bedford, Mr. D. T. Fisher and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fisher and children Margaret and Budd of Cumberland, Md., Mrs. Mary Imes of Ocean, Md., Mrs. Cally Richards and Miss Margaret Richards of Philadelphia, Captain Cally Richards of Philippine Islands, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Mock, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Sell, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Dull, Mrs. Bertha Bittinger, Miss Mary Bittinger and Miss Leone Sell of Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Feaster of Fishertown, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cook and daughter Emma, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stuckey, Mr. Clyde Naugle and Miss Elsie Naugle of Wolfburg, Mr. Fred Culp, Misses Derris and Gene Culp of Schellsburg.

The groom is the Deputy County Treasurer. He and his bride will reside on South Richard Street, Bedford, Penna., where they will be at home to their friends upon the completion of the apartments they are to occupy.

APRIL COW TESTING ASSOCIATION REPORT

In the 27 herds tested in the First Bedford Cow Testing Association, 26 cows produced over 50 lbs. fat and 23 produced over 1000 lbs milk; 1 cow totalled over 50 lbs. fat for the month and 3 produced over 1200 lbs. milk.

The names of members who had cows on the Honor Roll (produced over 1000 lbs. milk or 40 lbs fat) are as follows:

Name	No. Cows on Honor Roll
H. B. Hull	2
David L. Baker	1
D. C. Detwiler	4
N. Orlo Blough	3
Paul Fetter	2
Mearl King	1
Jacob B. Hoover	1
C. R. Fetter	1
Raymond Reasy	1
Albert B. Replogle	2
Elmer Wyles	2
H. H. Harclerode	1
C. P. Holsinger	1
Nelson Guyer	7
Wilson Kooniz	4
A. T. Replogle	1
Henry S. Kooniz	1

An error in March Report omitted one cow owned by Elmer Wyles. He also owns the cow producing over 1200 lbs milk. D. C. Detwiler is owner of the 50 lb. cow.

Los Angeles, Cal.

Ed. Gazette:—

Since my former letter I have seen many of the famous Orange, Lemon, Pear, Peach, Apricot, Olive and Walnut groves and immense vineyards of Cal. There is a peculiar intoxication as one rides for miles on beautifully paved roads, bounded on each side with equally beautiful orange groves laden with both fragrant blossoms and luscious golden oranges on the same tree. The Navel is mostly picked and taken in full blossom for next year's crop, some Navel are picked for Thanksgiving and on till now. Valencia are in bloom now and carrying fruit on same tree ready to pick in a few weeks. These are the two best varieties. Irrigation is indispensable and given from eight to ten times each year, thirty days interval at a cost of $7.50—$20.00 per acre for the season, for water only. Orange groves are usually in ten acre plots but appear as solid blocks. Many own single plots, while often much larger acres are owned by one individual or corporation. Clean cultivation is the rule, with heavy fertilization by stable manure, straw and commercial fertilizer, and a few using cover crops, which seem to be increasing. Citicola Scale is becoming serious, requiring spraying or fumigation. Among the noted Orange sections is Redland and no one should miss the drive on Smiley Heights, when visiting Redlands. We had the pleasure of plucking and eating oranges in the beautiful groves of our friend, Jno. M. Reynolds, thru the kindness of his manager, Mr. Chambers, who has the plot looking fine. Estimates run from 3000—4000 boxes from a 10 acres plot. Orange groves lack cheer this season because of low prices for their fruit, but lemon growers are the heavy losers as there is almost no sale for their fruit. Thousands of bushels of lemons hang untouched or drop to the ground and waste. Lemons can be had at the market for two cents per doz. Oranges, seconds or culls, but good for 75c per bushel box. Yet in the groceries they run from 50c per dozen down to 10c. From Nov. 1 to April 1, Southern California shipped out 13,064 cars of oranges alone and the first orange tree planted in California only 52 years ago.

The craze now is the Bartlett Pear orchard. In Antelope Valley are already planted about 700,000 Bartlett Pear Trees from 25 years down to 1 year. Largely in plots 10 acres but monopoly is getting its hand in, one party having 1200 acres. The brightest, most beautiful pear trees are in Antelope Valley. Only a few years ago a desert of Sage brush and much is yet desert for lack of water. When all these trees bear full crops and the growers must reach out for a market we may find more ready to test the merits of Gov. ownership of Railroads, rather than pay the excessive freight and passenger rates resulting from the extravagant unbusiness methods now practiced, which a patient public pays, because too partly blind from reading a press that has sold out to big interests and yet all these readers aver that they are very independent in politics and 100% American. I think some even ran as high as 1000% when they were selling coal and other necessities, and made us believe it was all Labor's fault "It is to laugh" but at our expense. Pear orchards run from $300—1500 per acre including water right, which costs about $4.00 per season per acre. A few apples are also grown in Antelope Valley, with promise of success as soon as more water is available.

I would not be true to California tho I recorded only her assets, sad liability mars her credit. She seems to hold front rank in her worship of Mammon and neglect or violation of moral standards in rural life. Trucks, Sprayers, Mowers, Hay, Trucking and all kinds of farm and orchard work are seen on Sunday. At the beach there seems no restraint. City life in the east of course is much the same as here. In both, the church and the world agree fairly well to the church's shame.

This condition will always result from our present status of giving more protection and sanctity to property rights than humanity, and then strive to cover up and deceive by the false movements of miscalculated Americanization dope, put over by a kept press. Penna., tho can match California in political sins, for the stench of Penroseism reaches the Pacific Coast, and our common sin, is that we allow big interests to finance both old parties, and all we had to do was vote their tickets and expect the people to rule.

10 acre pear plots net along $2,000 per season, and but few plots are on the market. The freeze has done much damage to nearly all fruit sections except the Orange and Lemon sections which have escaped with very little loss. Great Walnut, Peach and Apricot orchards with immense vineyards have been badly frozen in Lower and Middle California, leaving many owners in worse shape than eastern growers, who can milk another cow because of their varied industries. The apple market in Los Angeles is good. Standard boxes selling $2.50—4.00 for Standard Pack and $1.75—2.50 for jumble pack and in the stores they run from 10c to 15c per lb. for good apples. But few cull apples on the market. This should be proof to the eastern grower that competition from the west will be no menace to him and that the key to success for us is "Better Fruit". Indifference as to method and care of our orchards in the east is a far greater menace than any competition. California is great in many ways and has set for the east many examples worthy to follow, even tho we may not produce such wonders as the Mission Grape Vine at San Gabriel Mission, which is 144 years old, covers 10,000 sq. ft. and yields one and one-half tons of grapes yearly. "San" is so common in names that some wag has said "California is a place where names are all saints (san) and the people are all sinners". I'll be more charitable and write again of more of her greatness, still not forgetting that old Penna., is still the Keystone even tho we disgrace ourselves by allowing Penrose at the helm. Next letter I shall describe the great Watsonville Apple section.

A. C. Richards.

CARE OF THE ORCHARD

The loss of so large a part of this year's crop is a heavier blow to us because last year's expense made such a hole in the profits. Many growers find it necessary to operate their orchards with the least possible expense until another paying harvest. The difficulty is to decide what is wise and what is foolish economy.

We should not lose sight of the fact that we are growing next year's fruit buds this year, and that in no small measure the success of our 1923 crops also depends on how we care for our trees this summer. Can we save on the cost of cultivation? If you have a good cover-crop and have not plowed, leave it to be plowed next spring. If you have only a weed cover-top and have not turned it under, plow or disc at once. Fit the land, and the last of May or first of June seed to a mixture of alsike clover and alfalfa or some other legumes.

On some trees the early leaves were seriously damaged. This was usually the case with Smokehouse and Black Twig. An immediate application of two pounds of nitrate of soda or a pound and half of sulphate of ammonia may prove worth while, but in all other causes save the cost of your fertilizers in the cultivated orchards. Under no condition omit the nitrogen on the soil orchards, even if you have to borrow the money. It will pay big interest.

Next year promises to be our big year. Get ready for it now. Don't let the orchard get run down and thrown into alternate bearing.

SOME REPUBLICAN PROSPERITY

The 20 per cent wage reduction announced by the United States Steel Corporation for its great army of employees comes when the self-constituted party of prosperity and the full dinner pail is in control of all branches of the Government. It is for this reason alone to be held as much responsible for the industrial depression which has made this and other current wage reductions necessary as it held the Democratic Party responsible for the panic of 1893 following closely upon the return of that party to power earlier in the same year.

But we shall be more rational than the Republicans were then and still affirm for them large responsibility for these wage reductions.

Little more than a year has passed since the Steel Corporation increased wages by 10 per cent additional to prior increases. The armistice was then more than a year in the background. Germany had surrendered and the war was practically over. President Wilson had come back from Paris with a treaty of peace which was to mean peace for the whole world and a start by the whole world in the processes of reconstruction. Why did the Steel Corporation, under its especially farsighted management, choose that time to give wages another boost? Is there any other reason than that it anticipated an early rarification of the treaty and a beginning of world rehabilitation from the wreckage of war in which its own products must come into great demand? But its calculations were upset and by what party and by whom among its leaders all the world knows.

This is why steel and other wages are now being reduced when they were expected hardly a year ago to be holding a top figure.

Political parties with their policies cannot create prosperity at will. But they can easily wreck prosperity as they have.

CHURCH ACTION FOR DISARMAMENT

Letters addressed to 10,000 clergymen, signed by officers of the four largest religious organizations in the United States and sent out through the Committee on Reduction of Armaments of the Church Peace Union, constitute a potent and significant disarmament. The letters request pastors, to unite in a simultaneous appeal to their congregations on Sunday, June 5, to petition Congress to support President Harding in a call for a conference of leading nations on disarmament.

Can there be any doubt of the powerful effect on public and official opinion of a concerted plea of the churches for the preservation of peace through a common abandonment of competitive armament? By all the logic of religious teaching they should have initiated the movement they are now asking to join. They should have led the way and their voices should have been the first to be raised and the loudest to disclaim against the fallacy of great naval and military establishment as a safeguard against war. It cannot have needed the lesson of the great war to disprove that fallacy in pulpits where peace on earth, goodwill to men, is preached.

But the important thing is the enlistment of all American religious organizations, Protestants, Catholic and Jew, in a combined effort to remove the menace of militarism. There is no influence more powerful in American life and there is no national cause in the aid of which that influence can more properly be employed.

POINT

Although Mrs. George H. Miller has been seriously ill for some time, the report of her death on Tuesday night, May 3, was a shock to everyone. Her brother David Deaner of Maryland, was here to see her and had started home the day before she died. Mrs. Miller was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Deaner, who long ago proceeded her to the Great Beyond. She leaves a husband, one daughter and three sons to mourn her loss. Mrs. Miller was aged 57 years at the time of her death. She was a loving wife and mother. Interment was made in the cemetery near Fishertown on Thursday. Services were conducted by Revs. Pepple and Mickle. The many friends of George H. Miller and family earnestly sympathize with them in their bereavement.

Mr. Albert Gohn has broke ground for the foundation of a new barn on the old McMullin farm, which will be pushed along as he needs the space for his crops of grain and hay.

Our blacksmith Henry Shaffer has been rushed with work during all last week. The weather was too bad for the farmers to do any work except getting their shoeing done and repair work on their tools so that they would be ready to work when the weather would be fit.

Wonders and Earnest has put in a new engine at the mill of Russell Wonders at Springhope, and are now making good flour and chop. We know that they can build up a good trade by doing good work promptly as there is no mill close except the one at Schellsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McIlwaine expect to vacate their property today. Mr. McIlwaine will go to live with his daughter, Mrs. Waite, of Altoona, and Mrs. McIlwaine will go to live with another daughter, Mrs. Hall Davis, of New Paris. Mrs. McIlwaine is almost blind and unable to keep house any more. They were good neighbors and will be missed in various ways by our community.

H. S. McCreary, wife and son Nason, and Miss Anna Fulton visited the former's sister and family at Osterburg on Sunday.

EXECUTOR'S SALE of Valuable REAL ESTATE

The undersigned Executor of George Bush, late of Bedford Township, Bedford County, Pa., deceased, by virtue of the power contained in the will of deceased, will offer at public sale on Thursday, June 2, 1921, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., at the late home of deceased, four miles north of Bedford on the Hollidaysburg Road all of the real estate directed to be sold, to wit:

No. 1. A tract of land in Bedford Township, containing 25 acres more or less, adjoining lands of John H. L. Shaffer, Aaron Zimmers, the Cross Road School House and Frank Arnold, having thereon erected a new two story 8 room brick house, new bank barn and necessary out buildings. This is a fine property, well located along state road and in excellent condition.

CAUSE HENS TO LAY BETTER

Matter of Feeding During Cold Weather or Entails Use of Large Amount of Common Sense.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

On the feeding of the flock depends to a large extent not only the general health of the birds, but also the economy which promotes success. It is a subject, however, which should be studied with a large amount of common sense, for there are no hard and fast rules which can be laid down as applying to every case. The price of feeds and the general environment should be considered in determining the right rations, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

For the largest profit a good proportion of the eggs should be secured during the winter. If two extra eggs a week can be obtained from each hen a good profit will be made, while if the product is increased by only one egg a week in winter, this one egg will pay for all the feed the hen eats. To obtain this greater production not only should the fowls be young and of a good laying breed, but the feeder should have full knowledge of the proper feed and its preparation.

The nutriment in the feed of laying hens serves a twofold purpose—to repair waste and furnish heat to the body and to supply the egg-making materials. As only the surplus over what is needed for the body is available for egg production, the proper feeds should be fed in sufficient quantities to induce this production.

In supplying feed to fowls there are three kinds of constituents which should be present in certain fairly well-fixed proportions if the desired results are to be obtained most economically. These constituents are mineral, nitrogenous and carbonaceous; all which are contained in corn, wheat, oats and barley, but not in the right proportions to give the greatest egg yield. In addition some animal feed and green feed should be supplied.

Green Feed Is Quite Essential to the Production of Eggs in Winter.

In feeding poultry a valuable lesson may be learned from nature. In spring the production of eggs on the farm is an easy matter. Fowls at liberty to roam find an abundance of green and animal feed on their range, which with grain furnishes a perfect ration for laying hens. In addition to this they get plenty of exercise and fresh air. So far as lies within his power, then, the feeder should aim to make the winter conditions springlike.

Watch Your Weight.

Medical men all agree that in a great number of cases it would be of valuable assistance to them if patients could produce a weight record when going for advice; often it is impossible for a diagnosis to be given until a patient has tested his or her weight for a certain length of time.

Chapter V.
Britt thinks it was on account of the two messages from Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Duntun, and that is why he wants to talk to you about it. But you know, and I know, Jimmie, dear; and for Cousin Sheila's sake and Mr. Norcross, we must never slip it to a human soul. A new general manager has been appointed, and he is on his way out here from New York. Everything has gone to pieces on the railroad, and all of Mr. Norcross' friends are getting ready to resign. Isn't it perfectly heart-breaking?

It was; it was so heart-breaking that I just gasped once or twice and went off the hooks again, with Maisie Ann's frightened little shriek ringing in my ears as she tried to hold me back from slipping over the edge.

CHAPTER VI

What Every Man Knows—
I wasn't gone very long on this second excursion into the woozy-woozies, though it was night-time, and the shaded electric light was turned on when I opened my eyes and found Mrs. Sheila sitting by the bedside. The change in Mrs. Sheila sort of made me gasp. She wasn't any less pretty as she sat there with her hands clasped in her lap, but she was different; sober, and with the laugh all gone out of the big gray eyes, and a look in them as if she had suddenly become so wise that nobody could ever fool her.

"You are feeling better now?" she asked, when she found me staring at her.

I told her I guessed I was, but that my hand hurt me some.

"You have had a great shock of some kind—besides the burn, Jimmie," she rejoined, folding up the bed covers so that the bandaged hand would rest easier. "The doctors are all puzzled. Does your head feel quite clear now—so that you can think?"

"It feels as if I had a crazy clock in it," I said. "But the thinking part is all right. Have you heard anything from Mr. Norcross yet?"

"Not a word. We have been hoping that you could tell us something when you should recover sufficiently to talk. Can't you, Jimmie?"

Remembering what Maisie Ann had told me just before I went off the hooks, I thought I might tell her a lot if I dared to. But that wouldn't do. So I just said:

"I told Maisie Ann all I knew about Mr. Norcross. He left the office some little time before I did—with Mr. Ripley. I didn't know where they were going."

"They went to the hotel," she helped out. "Mr. Ripley says they sat in the lobby until after ten o'clock, and then Mr. Norcross went up to his rooms."

Of course, I knew that Mr. Ripley knew all about the Hatch ruction; but if he hadn't told her, I wasn't going to tell her.

"There was some trouble in connection with Mr. Hatch, that evening, wasn't there?" she asked.

"Hatch had some trouble—yes. But I guess the boss didn't have any," I replied.

"Tell me about it," she commanded; and I told her just as little as I could; how Hatch had had an interview with the boss earlier in the evening, while I was away.

"It wasn't a quarrel?" she suggested. "Why should they quarrel?" I asked.

She shook her head. "You are sparing with me, Jimmie, in some mistaken idea of being loyal to Mr. Norcross. You needn't, you know. Mr. Norcross has told me all about his plans; he has even been generous enough to say that I helped him make them. That is why I cannot understand why he should do as he has done—or at least as everybody believes he has done."

I saw how it was. She was trying to find some explanation that would clear the boss, and perhaps implicate the Hatch crowd. I couldn't tell her the real reason why he had run away. Maisie Ann had been right as right about that; we must keep it to our two selves. But I tried to let her down easy.

"Mr. Van Britt has told you about those two telegrams that came after Mr. Norcross left the office," I said, still covering up the fact that the telegrams hadn't been delivered—that they were probably in the pocket of my coat right now, wherever that was. "They were enough to make any man throw up his hands and quit, I should say."

"No," she insisted, looking me straight in the eyes. "You are not telling the truth now, Jimmie. You know Mr. Norcross better than any of us, and you know that it isn't the least little bit like him to walk out and leave everything to go to wreck. Have you ever known of his doing anything like that before?"

I had to admit that I hadn't; that, on the other hand, it was the very thing you'd least expect him to do. But at the same time I had to hang on to my sham belief that it was the thing he had done: either that, or tell her the truth.

"Every man reaches his limit, some time," I protested. "What was Mr. Norcross to do, I'd like to know; with Mr. Chadwick getting scared out, and Mr. Duntun threatening to fire him?"

"The thing he wouldn't do would be to go off and leave all of his friends, Mr. Van Britt and Mr. Hornack, and all the rest, to fight it out alone. You know that as well as I do, Jimmie Dods!"

"If you won't take my theory, you must have one of your own," I said; not knowing what else to say.

"I have," she flashed back, "and I want you to hurry and get well so that you can help me trace it out."

"Me?" I queried.

"Yes, you. The others are all so stupid! even Mr. Van Britt and Mr. Ripley. They insist that Mr. Norcross went east to see and talk with Mr. Chadwick. They have found out that Mr. Chadwick left Chicago the day after he sent that telegram, to go up into the Canadian woods to look at some mines, or something. They say that Mr. Norcross has followed him, and that is why they don't hear anything from him."

"What do you think?" I asked.

She didn't answer right away, and in the little pause I saw a sort of frightened look come into her eyes. But all she said was, "I want you to hurry up and get well, Jimmie, so you can help."

"I'm well enough now, if they'll let me get up."

"Not tonight; tomorrow, maybe." Then: "Mr. Van Britt is down-stairs with Cousin Basil. He has been very anxious to talk with you as soon as you were able to talk. May I send him up?"

Of course I said yes; and pretty soon after she went away, our one and only millionaire came in. He looked as he always did; just as if he had that minute stepped out of a Turkish bath where they shave and scrub and polish a man till he shines.

"How are you, Jimmie?" he rapped out. "Glad to see you on earth again. Feeling a little more fit, tonight?"

I told him I didn't think it would take more than half a dozen fellows of my size to knock me out, but I was gaining. Then he sat down and put me on the question rack. I gave him all I had—except that thing about the undelivered telegrams and two or three others that I couldn't give him or anybody.

"We're in pretty bad shape, aren't we?" I suggested.

"We couldn't be in worse shape," was the way he put it. Then he told me a little more about Maisie Ann had; how President Duntun had wired to stop all the betterment work on the Short Line until the new general manager could get on the ground; how the local capitalists at the head of the new Citizens' Storage & Warehouse organization were scared plumb out of their shoes and were afraid to make a move; and how the newspapers all over the state were saying that it was just what they had expected—that the railroad was crooked in root and branch, and that a good man couldn't stay with it long enough to get his breath.

"Then the new general manager has been appointed?" I asked.

He nodded. "Some fellow by the name of Dismuke. I don't know him, and neither does Hornack. He is on his way west now, they say."

"Mr. Norcross hasn't shown up at Mr. Chadwick's Chicago office?" I ventured.

"No. The telegraph people have been wiring everywhere and can't get any trace of him."

"Tell them to try Galesburg. That's where his people live."

"I know," he said; and he made a note of the address on the back of an envelope. Then he came at me again, on the "direct," as a lawyer would say.

"You've been closer to Norcross in an intimate way than any of us, Jimmie: haven't you seen or heard something that would help to turn a little more light on this damnable blow-up?"

I hadn't—outside of the one thing I couldn't talk about—and I told him so, and at this he let me see a little more of what was going on in his own mind.

"You're one of us, in a way, Jimmie, and I can talk freely to you. Mrs. Macrae insists that there has been foul play of some sort. You say you weren't present when Hatch called on Norcross at the office that night?"

"No; I came in just after Hatch went away."

"Did Norcross say anything to make you think there had been a fight?"

"He told me that Hatch was abusive and had made threats—in a business way."

"In a business way? What do you mean by that?"

I quoted the boss' own words, as nearly as I could recall them.

"So Hatch did make a threat, then? Can you add anything more?"

I could, but I didn't want to. Mr. Van Britt didn't know anything about the Sand Creek siding hold-up, or I supposed he didn't, and I didn't want to be the first one to tell him. Besides, the whole business was beside the mark. Maisie Ann knew, and I knew, that the boss, strong and unbreakable as he was in other ways, had simply thrown up his hands and quit because somebody had told him that Mrs. Sheila had a husband living. So I just said:

"Nothing that would help out," and after he had talked a little while longer our only millionaire went downstairs again.

It's so funny how things change around for a person just by giving them time to sort of shake down into place and fit themselves together. After a while the chin edge of the wedge that Mrs. Sheila had been trying to drive into me began to take hold, just a little, in spite of what I knew—or thought I knew. Was it barely possible, after all, that there had been foul play of some sort?

In the first place, something had been done to me by somebody: it was a sure thing that I hadn't crippled and half-killed myself all by my lonesome. Then they had said that the boss stayed up with Mr. Ripley that night until after ten o'clock, and had then gone up to go to bed. That being the case, how could anybody have got to him between that time and the leaving time of the midnight Fast Mail to tell him about Mrs. Sheila?

Anyway it was stacked up, it made a three-cornered puzzle, needing somebody to tackle it right away; and when I finally went to sleep it was with the notion that, sick or no sick, I was going to turn out early in the morning and get busy.

I was well enough to get up the next morning, and when I phoned to Mr. Van Britt he sent his car out to the major's to take me down to the office. Just before I left the house, Mrs. Sheila waylaid me, and after telling me that I must be careful and not take cold in the burnt hand, she put in another word about the boss' disappearance.

"I want you to remember what I said last night, Jimmie, and not let the others talk you over into the belief that Mr. Norcross has gone away because he was either discouraged or afraid. He wouldn't do that: you know it, and I know it. We are his friends, you and I, and we must stand by him and defend him when he isn't here to defend himself."

It did me good to hear her talk that way. I had been sort of getting ready to dislike her for letting the boss get in so deep and not telling him straight out that she was a married woman and he mustn't; but when I saw that she was trying to be just as loyal to him as I was, it pulled me over to her side again.

Though the boss' disappearance was now four days old, things were still in a sort of daze down at the railroad offices. Mr. Van Britt, being the general superintendent and next in command, had moved over into the boss' office, and Fred May was doing his shorthand work. They wouldn't let me do anything much—I couldn't do much with my right arm in a sling—so I had a chance to hang around and size up the situation. If you want to know how it sized up, you can take it from me that it was pretty bad. People all along the line were bombarding Mr. Van Britt with letters and telegrams wanting to know what was going to be done, and what the change in management was going to mean for the public, and all that. You see, Mr. Norcross had laid out a mighty attractive program in the little time he had been at the wheel, and now it looked as if it was all going to be dumped into the ditch.

Mr. Van Britt saw and talked with everybody, and when he could wedge off a minute or two of privacy, he'd go into the third room of the suite and thresh it out with Juneman, or Billoughby, or Mr. Ripley. From these private talks I found out that there was still some doubt in the minds of all four of them about the boss' drop-out—as to whether it was voluntary or not.

Also, I found out what had been Rainbow's Formation.

While it is true that the beautiful colors displayed by the rainbow are due to the passage of light through raindrops, the popular conception that the drops are directly in line between the sun and the bow is incorrect, according to scientists. The light enters the raindrop and is refracted and reflected back to form the bow. In this passage through the drop the different colors are produced which, blended make our ordinary white light.

COFFEE ECONOMY

Glendora Coffee is packed in 1 lb. and 3 lb. tin cans which retain the flavor and aroma just as it left the roaster.

Coffee packed in bags and fibre containers absorb most essential oils which permits the coffee to deteriorate.

GLENDORA COFFEE, packed in tin cans, retains all the strength and flavor, hence more cups to the pound.

Try a can and be convinced of the superior quality.

In 1 lb. and 3 lb. tin cans.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear mother, Harriet A. Housel, who departed this life two years ago. I miss you, I miss our home dear mother.

I miss you from your palsied place, A shadow o'er my life is cast, I miss thy kind and loving face.

I miss your kind and willing hand, Your true and earnest care; - A home is dark without you.

Mother is missed everywhere. We miss her, yes we miss her.

The voice we loved is stilled, But we hope in Heaven to greet her.

Where loved ones need not part. But God in his wisdom has given us opportunities to help and care for others.

And partly forget our own sorrows, And to those who have father and mothers.

May you who read, make their lives a little brighter while you may.

Daughter Anna.
